added with an oak stained rebate.

Elegance is the theme that continues upstairs to the master bedroom, built into the French-inspired turret to one side of the property. Entered by a stone staircase with frameless glass balustrade, the double height room is simple and contemporary in its décor. White walls contrast with a polished walnut floor, and accents of charcoal grey are provided by the bed linen and zebra-stripe rug. ‘We had in mind a very simple and luxurious feel that you might experience in a beautiful hotel,’ explains Justin. It’s the feel which inspired the en suite, too, with its dramatic oval freestanding bath. Splashes of glamour are added by feature wallpapers, designed to add touches of personality to the stylish and relaxing spaces.

With their project finally complete, are Justin and Kelly ready to retire from the world of self-build? ‘Not at all,’ laughs Justin. ‘We’re itching to do it all over again.’ ■
